Price Memorial Hall:

Price Memorial Hall is the oldest and most recognizable building on campus with its gold steeple. Dahlonega is known as the sight of the first major U.S. gold rush, and before the school bought this building, it was a U.S. mint where they would make gold coins. When the school bought it in 1873, it was the only building on campus, so students will live, eat, and have classes in this building. Today, it houses the President's office and her cabinet. It also houses the Center of Global Engagement. UNG offers Study Abroad to all majors, so this is the office you would visit if interested and plan where you wanted to go, for how long, and how to pay for it.
