

Dunlap Mathis- GVL campus tour

This is where the Art Studio classes are located where students get the privilege of hands-on learning experience. Fun fact, UNG has a really cool 3D printer! One of my favorite things about this building is the amazing artwork all over the hallway walls. Student artwork is always being displayed on the walls to show off the amazing talent UNG students have! The Office of Disability Services is located in this building for students with any learning or physical disability. They help these students to make appropriate accommodations to facilitate their time at UNG. A really great thing they do is they hire student note takers for students who need this accommodation and it is completely anonymous. The student note taker gets the advantage of early class registration, which really comes in handy!
