

Betty Dalton-Shott Scholarship

Betty Dalton-Shott is an ardent and long-time supporter of the University of North Georgia. From 1970 until 1988 she was involved in alumni affairs and the instructional programs of the university. She was employed in the University Department of Education from 1974 to 1977 at a crucial time when student teaching at the secondary level and graduate programs were being developed.

Betty was instrumental in developing off-campus educational centers throughout northeast Georgia. A successful business education teacher herself, Betty believes that students with the potential to be outstanding teachers should receive extra support during one of the most intellectually, emotionally, and financially challenging times in their careers. This is reflected in her scholarship for UNG education interns.

“Betty Dalton-Shott has meant a great deal to UNG, and her legacy will continue through this generous and far-sighted gift.”
