

DEPARTMENT NEWSLETTER

A COMMUNICATION OF THE PSIA DEPARTMENT OF UNG

Greetings Everyone,

Hello and welcome to our fourteenth issue.

As is the norm, our #PSIAfamily has been busy since the spring edition. And as usual, space constraints do not allow us to cover everything. That said, in the coming pages you will get a flavor of what our students, alumni and faculty are up to and have achieved the past several months. For more articles about our family visit PSIA News located on our Department Homepage. There you can keep up-to-date on all that is happening with our extended family, as well as to find past articles and all previous Newsletters.

Before we get to the rest of the newsletter's content, I want to once more extend a special "Thank You" to all who generously have given to our Dr. Barry B. Friedman scholarship fund. Your generosity has assisted IA major Victoria Landa, pre-law major Fatima Santillan and SSST major Jordan Barocas with the economic aspect of their studies. Please consider making a gift to the FRIEDMAN SCHOLARSHIP FUND today as part of our RISE '25 campaign so we can achieve our goal of endowment status and thereby enable us (via you) to assist future PSIA students like Victoria, Fatima and Jordan. (see pg 13 and also our end page.)

Once again the #PSIAfamily boasts the #1 cadet in the nation! SSST major Cadet Benjamin Smith joins Chase Strickland, IA '14, as being recognized by the US Army Cadet Command as the top ROTC cadet in the US!

We trust you will find this newsletter informative as well as entertaining, and would really like to include YOUR activities and accomplishments in a future issue. Please get in touch with us by filling out our ALUMNI INFORMATION FORM or simply drop us an e-mail at POLSIA-DAH@UNG.EDU. We look forward to hearing from you!

Chase Sanger -- Marietta Business Association's New President

Chase Sanger (r) with fellow Board member Justin Arndt

Chase Sanger, PS '12, was elected President of the Marietta Business Association (MBA) and took office on January 1, 2025. His theme is "The Year of Service" and the MBA will be partnering with the Kiwanis Club of Marietta on their Flag Project which deploys several hundred American flags around the city six times per year. The MBA will be selling merchandise with proceeds going to Shepherd's Men and the SHARE Military Initiative which provides life-changing care for Post-9/11 Veterans dealing with traumatic brain injuries and PTSD.

The Marietta Business Association comprises over 300 member-businesses and exists to promote the civic, social, business goals, tourism, commercial and economic welfare of our members.

Chase was highlighted in our Spring 2024 Newsletter. He currently works as a Field Representative for U.S. Congressman Barry Loudermilk, GA-11. In addition to his service on Marietta's board, Chase also serves on UNG's Alumni Association Board.

Benjamin Smith Leads the Nation

A tremendous "WELL DONE" to Cadet Benjamin Smith, recognized by the US Army's Cadet Command as the No. 1 overall Army ROTC cadet out of 5,538 graduating nationally for the 2025-26 academic year.

Ben achieves this accolade eleven years after IA major Jonathan Strickland, '14 achieved that same distinction.

Ben, from Decatur, TN, is an SSST / Military Science major. He said being the No. 1 cadet "was a pleasant surprise."

It may have been to him, but probably no to his peers and his professors. Some of his cadet career highlights include:

- Graduating from Air Assault School and Jungle School and attending Sapper School, all of which are Army specialty schools. He was the honor graduate of his Air Assault School class, and he was one of three UNG cadets to earn the Jungle Tab this past summer.
- Overseas experience at military academies in Poland and Latvia.
- A pair of stints at the Swiss Army mountaineering courses.
- Commander, Boar's Head Brigade's Mountain Order of Colombo.

We in the PSIA Department are exceptionally proud of Ben, and wish him all the best in his future Army career.

Ben, along with UNG President Michael Shannon

PSIA 2025 Fulbright Honorees

Twenty-five percent of the UNG students designated earlier this spring as Fulbright semifinalists for 2025-26 are members of the #PSIAfamily!

“Well-done” to:

Class of ‘26 International Affairs major/ Korean language minor Justin Wlosko;

Class of ‘26 International Affairs/French double major Sara Gonzalez;

May 2025 graduate Political Science/Pre-law major Fatima Santillan; and December 2024 graduate Political Science/Pre-law major Tracy Amaya.

Of these four, we have THREE selectees -- one of our students was selected to travel to Spain; and another two were named as alternates.

Tracy is heading to Spain as an English teaching assistant (ETA), while Fatima and Sara, who also have their sights on an ETA position in Spain, have been named as alternates.

When she received news of her selection, Tracy wrote her advisor, Dr. Bibek Chand:

“To say that I am honored and humbled would be an understatement. I hope to continue making the PSIA Department proud and hopefully encourage more students to pursue similar opportunities.”

The U.S. State Department’s Fulbright program enables graduates to pursue research activities, become English teaching assistants, or enroll in graduate school in other countries. It is designed to increase mutual understanding between U.S. citizens and residents of more than 160 foreign countries, according to the Fulbright website.

Congratulations to these members of our #PSIAfamily who have excelled as students and who together contributed to UNG being named one of the Fulbright programs “Top Producing Institutions” for 2025-26!

UNG’s 2025 Meridian-Cox Foreign Service Fellow

Senior political science major Claudia Marban spent her final undergraduate summer participating in the Meridian-Cox Foreign Service Fellowship for Emerging Leaders. Selected as one of just 20 students nationwide, and one of two UNG students, Claudia gained hands-on insight into careers in the Foreign Service through this fully-funded program.

A resident of Gillsville, GA and a graduate of East Hall High School, Claudia first became interested in diplomacy while participating in Model United Nations at UNG. The fellowship offered her an opportunity to explore her passion more deeply and think about her future career path.

During the program, Claudia visited the United Nations Information Center and the Peace Corps, met with diplomats and Foreign Service officers, and participated in workshops highlighting the real-world challenges of a diplomatic career. For Claudia, the fellowship provided invaluable insight into what a career in the Foreign Service really entails.

Associate PSIA professor Dr. Bibek Chand, mentor to Claudia on our Gainesville campus said:

“This selective fellowship was a great opportunity for our students to get a glimpse of Foreign Service opportunities and experience professional networking in D.C. [Claudia has] gone above and beyond to seek opportunities for professional development. Apart from being very engaged on campus, [she has] consistently sought external opportunities. The fellowship challenges students to think about long-term career choices and the importance of engaging outside of one’s comfort zones. I am confident that Claudia gained great experiences that will inform her career trajectories.”

With her roots in Gainesville, her UNG education, and the experience gained from the Meridian-Cox Fellowship, Claudia is excited to pursue a career in diplomacy that will allow her to make a meaningful impact in international relations.

“I wanted to learn more about diplomacy and which careers are out there.” Claudia Marban

Students Join NISA '25 Staff

The fourth iteration of Dr. Eddie Mienie's National Intelligence Summer Academy (NISA) was held on UNG's Cumming campus this past July. New to the NISA program this year, and a huge success, was the inclusion on the staff of four undergraduate students, two of whom -- Hailey Thomas, '26 and Cristin Gibson, '27, are members of the #PSIAfamily.

Both students had a terrific time, from the attendee side as well as from the staff support side, and reflect on their week:

Majoring in SSST with an Intelligence concentration and a Russian language minor, senior Hailey Thomas hails from Seville, FL. During the current academic year she is serving as president of IAFIE -- the International Association for Intelligence Education, as well as the Boar's Head Brigade's Headquarters Company commander.

"I'm really looking for an idea of how I can provide better content to the student members of IAFE and learn something more to benefit my own career," she said. "Being a staff assistant inspired me to continue moving in this direction and verifies it. This is exactly what I want to be doing: work in intelligence, help protect the United States and work to uphold the Constitution."

Gainesville native and fellow SSST/Intelligence major junior Cristin Gibson wanted to:

"... meet people in my field of study and hear from them what their lives have been like in their respective agencies, hoping they can provide insight as to how I could possibly do the same for myself one day," she said. "I love the diversity within the FBI. I love what it's about and what it does domestically and internationally."

From Cristin's perspective, the speakers did not disappoint:

"They are so dedicated to what they do. They have served a lifetime to their country, the cause, and all they want to do is help the next generation. I think that's important. They've shared and relived some of the best - and worst - moments, but they love what they do. It's tough and it's dirty. It's not glamorous like Hollywood makes it out to be."

Kudos to our PSIA cadets, who are among the 37 members of the Boar's Head Brigade that earned Distinguished Military Graduate (DMG) status for the 2025-26 academic year. Special kudos to SSST major Cadet Benjamin Smith, who was ranked #1 among all ROTC cadets in the country. (see article pg. 3)

DMG recognition is given by the US Army's Cadet Command to commissioning cadets who finish in the top 20% of Army ROTC graduates on the national Order of Merit List. Cadets join the list by achieving superior grade-point averages, strong performance in the Army Fitness Test, and proving their worth as exceptional leaders in their college ROTC training. The DMG designation remains on their Army record throughout their military career.

Senior cadet Mia Libosada, from Marietta, was interviewed by UNG News. Mia is an IA /Asia major with a minor in Korean and has won the nationally competitive Boren and Critical Language scholarships. That funding allowed her to study abroad at Yonsei University and Pusan University in South Korea. She also took part in a military exchange at the Korean Military Academy. In total, she has spent about two years studying in South Korea. Mia is currently completing an internship at the Daniel K. Inouye Asia-Pacific Center for Security Studies in Honolulu, Hawaii, before commissioning in December.

"All of these experiences have exposed me to different people, perspectives and the goals of various nations," Mia told UNG News. "These opportunities have prepared me well for what I will be facing as a newly commissioned second lieutenant in the Army."

Hearty CONGRATULATIONS to these outstanding future leaders and members of our family!

Dr. Eric Wilk Receives Teaching Excellence Award

CONGRATULATIONS to Assistant Professor Dr. Eric Wilk, the 2025 recipient of the University of North Georgia's Distinguished Teaching Award!

Presented by UNG's Center for Teaching, Learning, and Leadership (CTLL), the award recognizes excellence in teaching by a faculty member over the course of a distinguished career. CTLL's Award Review Committee recognized Eric's exceptionally strong "alignment with the award criteria including his teaching philosophy, methodical examination of practice, and continual improvement of teaching and learning." Additionally, the Committee highlighted his "history of sustained impact on student learning both in and out of the classroom."

"I'm humbled to win when there are so many great teachers here at UNG. From the beginning, teaching has brought a number of obstacles to someone who had a debilitating fear of public speaking, but God's grace has helped transform that fear into a strength."

Since joining PSIA in August of 2021, Dr. Wilk has been an integral member of our political science program on the Gainesville campus, focusing on American politics, statistics, and research design. He earned his Ph.D. in political science from the University at Buffalo (UB), SUNY in 2010 and a Master's Degree in political management at the George Washington University in Washington, DC in 2000.

PSIA Associate Department Head Dr. Raluca Viman-Miller, who oversees our Gainesville faculty, was not surprised --

Dr. Eric Wilk with Nighthawk Legacy Award Winner Lauren Nelson

"Eric is a great asset to our political science program. His is a conscientious teacher who continually makes adjustments to his classes to keep them relevant and engaging for all his students, whether brand-new freshmen or soon-to-graduate seniors. His receipt of this recognition is a credit both to him personally, and also to the entire PSIA department."

"I'm humbled to win when there are so many great teachers here at UNG." Dr. Erik Wilk

Blue Ridge Faculty Member Gets a New Position

CONGRATULATIONS to Associate Professor Dr. Nathan Price, who was named by UNG President Michael Shannon to serve as interim executive director of UNG's Blue Ridge Campus, effective Aug 1st, when the current executive director, Sandy Ott, retires.

As many of you know, Nathan has been PSIA's sole faculty member on the Blue Ridge Campus since it opened in 2015. Those of you who had him at the front of your classroom for either Global Issues, Intro to American Government, or Intro to Comparative Politics know first-hand his passion for helping students #experiencemore. In addition to his ten years in the UNG classroom, Nathan has led both the Blue Ridge Scholars program and Emerging Leaders Program.

Nathan is extremely honored to have been chosen for this position and is looking forward to entering a new phase of his professional career. While he will still be found in the Blue Ridge classrooms, although perhaps not as often as previously, he will be leading the Blue Ridge campus during what he sees will be an "exciting time." The campus recently opened its new "David E. Ralston Hall," named in honor of the late speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives and 1976 UNG Political Science major. Two main tenants of the Hall will be the Education program, currently on campus, and the Nursing program, scheduled to arrive in 2026. The presence of both of these programs and the offering of their respective undergraduate degrees to the students in Blue Ridge fills, according to Dr. Price, "a large need in the region and presents not only a fantastic opportunity for the students but also for the entire Northern Georgia community.

Nathan with Lori Bramlett, Assistant Director of Enrollment Services (l) and Emma Mitchell, Blue Ridge Scholar & two-time Student Government Association president

An Associate Professor of Political Science and International Affairs, Nathan completed his bachelor's degree in political science and history at Miami University and a Master of Arts and Ph.D. in political science at Louisiana State University. He studied at Miami University's Dolibois European Center located in Luxembourg. Nathan has served as a faculty member for the USG Goes Global program in Madrid, Spain. He has also been a go-to political science expert for national and Atlanta media during the 2020, 2022 and 2024 election cycles.

Changing Faces in PSIA

A hearty "WELCOME" to the three most recent additions to our faculty ranks -- Drs. Ronnie Grant, T.J. Liguori and Michael Westberg.

Ronnie comes to us direct from Florida International University, where he received his Ph.D. in International Relations (IR) in 2024. In addition to his IR doctorate, Ronnie holds a Juris Doctor (JD) from the University of Puerto Rico. He joins our International Affairs program and will be sharing his expertise with undergraduate students primarily in the fields of International Law and everyone's favorite -- International Political Economy

T.J. arrives at UNG from an extended stint in the undergraduate classroom at his alma mater, Florida International University. Dr. Liguori completed his doctoral work at FIU in International Relations in 2020 and was appointed the Khalid and Diana Mirza Visiting Postdoctoral Associate in FIU's Department of Politics and International Relations the following fall. His expertise in political theory and the South Asian region is a welcome addition to our International Affairs program.

Michael adds his expertise to our Political Science program on our Oconee campus. Having grown up and spent most of his adult life in the greater Atlanta area, including receiving both his M.A. and his PH.D. in Political Science from Georgia State University, he is already well-acquainted with UNG and the high-caliber students in PSIA.

While saying "hello" to Ronnie, T.J. and Michael, we unfortunately are forced to say "goodbye" to Dr. Elliot Montagano. Those of you who got to know Dr. Montagano over the past several years, particularly those of you in our political science program, know what a wealth of experience he brought to the classroom. Though we will miss Elliot, we wish him all the best as he heads out on the next phase of his professional life.

4 + 1 Arrives

We have unveiled an exciting new opportunity for our most motivated students: the MAIA 4+1 Program. This initiative, set to be available to students beginning in the fall of 2026, will provide an accelerated pathway to a master's degree. Quite simply -- undergraduates will be able to earn both a bachelor's AND a master's degree in a total of just five years!

The program was created to help talented students fast-track their careers in international affairs while staying within the UNG community. "This initiative is about giving our students an edge...It allows them to deepen their expertise and enter the job market with both academic and practical advantages." Dr. Cristian Harris, Professor of Political Science and one of the program's two advisors said.

A Streamlined Pathway to Success

The MAIA 4+1 Program is open to Dahlonega campus-based students majoring in most of our degree programs -- Political Science, Political Science/Pre-Law, International Affairs, or Strategic and Security Studies (only the International Affairs concentration). During their final year as an undergraduate, students in the program can take four graduate-level courses that will count toward both degrees. After completing their undergraduate requirements, just one additional year of graduate study leads to the Master of Arts in International Affairs (MAIA).

The program's structure is intended to provide continuity in mentorship and instruction, as graduate students will be able to work with the same dedicated faculty members who guided them through their undergraduate studies. Summer courses will also be available to help participants stay on track or even get ahead.

Who Can Apply?

The application period will open each May, and juniors who have completed at least 80 credit hours (including 21 upper-division hours) will be eligible to apply. A minimum GPA of 3.25, two letters of recommendation, and a 600-word Statement of Purpose will be part of the application to help ensure students are ready to meet the challenges of graduate-level coursework while finishing their undergraduate degrees.

Preparing Global Leaders

The 4+1 Program was developed in response to growing student demand for programs that combine academic rigor, flexibility, and real-world preparation. In a field as interconnected and competitive as international affairs, this accelerated option provides students with a head start toward advanced careers in diplomacy, global policy, and international organizations.

As Dr. Harris explained, "Our graduates are entering a world that requires both deep knowledge and adaptability. The 4+1 Program gives them both—faster."

For students eager to lead in the international arena, UNG's MAIA 4+1 Program isn't just a degree path—it's a launchpad for global impact.

NISA 2025

Once again, Dr. Eddie Mienie's National Intelligence Summer Academy (NISA) held on UNG's Cumming campus this past July was a resounding success for the high school students in attendance. Organized and led by Dr. Mienie, the program provided an intense and exciting look at the field of intelligence and the US Intelligence Community.

During the week-long program,

NISA attendees got to hear first-hand from practitioners in the field — from US agencies such as the National Security Agency, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as well as from foreign organizations. Together, the speakers combined their experiences and insights to meet NISA's three primary goals – to lift the veil of secrecy on the hidden world of intelligence; to provide a context for understanding the important role intelligence has played in our nation's history and continues to play today; and to provide a foundational knowledge of the intelligence field, setting the stage for possible careers in the field.

RISE 2025 & the Friedman Scholarshi

RISE, UNG's annual crowd-funding campaign, is nearing its conclusion, officially ending November 7, 2025.

The RISE Campaign is organized by UNG's Alumni Association and seeks to raise money for specific UNG scholarships.

As we have the past several years, we continue the drive to fund our own PSIA scholarship, The Barry D. Friedman Scholarship in Political Science & International Affairs.

To date you have contributed nearly $23,000 to the scholarship fund!

By the end of this current RISE campaign, we are hoping to reach the "magical" $25,000 benchmark to make this scholarship endowed and self-perpetuating, so students for years to come can benefit from it.

We awarded the first scholarship in 2023. The three recipients of the scholarship, whom you met in the past three Spring Newsletters respectively, each received $1,000 for their final academic year. Thanks to your generosity, future PSIA majors -- undergraduate students majoring in Political Science, International Affairs, or Strategic and Security Studies who have completed at least nine credit hours in POLS courses and who have a minimum cumulative GPA of at least a 2.75 -- will receive the same amount. Selections take place every spring semester.

The Barry D. Friedman Scholarship seeks to make learning more affordable, reward students that study hard, and show our students that the PSIA Department truly cares about them.

Professor emeritus Dr. Barry D. Friedman, former Department Head Dr. Dlynn Armstrong-Williams, and the department as a whole designed this scholarship to recognize and support exceptional students within our department. The scholarship has been made possible through the generous contributions of people like you who share our passion in investing in the future of our students.

If YOU are willing and able to help us achieve our goal and assist future PSIA students in their academic pursuits, even if it's only $1, please visit us:

FRIEDMAN SCHOLARSHIP

Let us come together as a family to celebrate this exciting opportunity and support the next generation of Political Science & International Affairs students!

Dahlonge's Memorial Hall Gets a New Look

If you haven't been on the Dahlonge campus in a while, prepare for another "shock" (or two)!

As UNG continues to evolve and change, another long-standing feature has quietly made its exit: the 25-meter indoor pool housed in the Dahlonge campus' Memorial Hall.

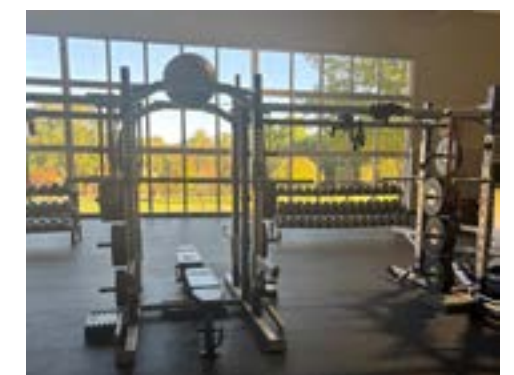

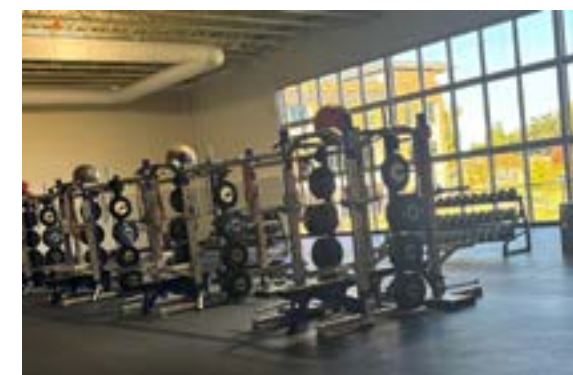

The pool, while filled with fond memories to many alumni and longtime Nighthawks, had become increasingly plagued with low usage coupled with high maintenance costs, an unsustainable combination.

As part of the department's larger efforts to support student sports activities, the pool was filled in and remade into a large and airy strength-training facility. In combination with the weight room located in the Convocation Center, UNG's athletes have plenty of options to improve their performance and continue UNG's tradition of success.
