I will travel the globe to fulfill my academic and career goals.

Courtney Kennedy-Graff graduated from UNG in 2017 with a degree in international affairs.

Courtney is pursuing a graduate degree in diplomacy and global governance at Vesalius College in Brussels, Belgium, after receiving a merit-based scholarship.

Courtney credits her time at UNG for making her dreams a reality.

Dwight Bennett honed his leadership skills through the Corps of Cadets experience going from Company First Sergeant to Brigade Sergeant Major to Company Commander.

After learning Arabic in UNG’s Summer Language Institute, he won a grant to study abroad in Morocco.

Before commissioning into the military, Dwight will travel to North Africa as a Fulbright Student.

I will commission as an officer, fluent in a strategic language.
Maxwell Bentley started making videos for local businesses and steadily gained traction. The next thing he knew, he and his business, Bentley Media, were finalists for the 2018 Business of the Year award with the Cumming-Forsyth County Chamber of Commerce.

After changing his major from computer science to communications with a concentration in film, he continues to attend classes and run his business full-time.

Maxwell’s ultimate goal is to become an industry leader in communications with film being his weapon of choice.

I will be a leader in communications

I will be a pediatric cardiologist.

Cyndy Solis-Cruz began her studies at UNG as a dual enrollment student with an eye toward an engineering degree.

After taking chemistry she discovered a passion for the subject, changed her major and found her life’s calling through volunteering.

Through her involvement with UNG’s Honors Program, she became an elementary school reader-mentor. Volunteering sharpened her focus on becoming a pediatric cardiologist.

Trey Young, a communication major and Albany, Georgia, native wants to make the world a more mindful and racially equal place, which thrust him into the political arena.

Selected by the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation to serve as an intern in Washington, D.C., Trey’s political engagement is just getting started.

He also interned for a New York Times best-selling author and speech writer for President Barack Obama.

I will change the world for the better.
